Who was John Sherman?

John Sherman was born in Lancaster, Ohio on May 10, 1823 to Charles Robert Sherman and Mary Hoyt Sherman. He was the eighth child out of eleven, which also included Charles Taylor Sherman and William Tecumseh Sherman. John's father, Judge Charles Sherman, died when he was six years old and when he was eight. he moved to Mount Vernon, Ohio. At the age of seventeen, John decided to follow the family tradition and became a lawyer. It was at the age of seventeen when John moved to Mansfield to study law with his brother Charles. He studied for four years and passed the bar at the age of twenty-one. It was in Mansfield John met his future wife Cecelia Stewart, who was the daughter of wealthy Mansfield Judge, and entered politics. He spent many years as a senator, sought the Republican presidential nomination in 1880, 1884 and 1888, and was elected Secretary of State under President William McKinley in 1897, in which he resigned in 1898 due to failing health. John Sherman died in his home in Mansfield on October 25, 1900. He is mostly remembered for two Acts that bear his name the Sherman Antitrust Act and the Sherman Silver Standard Act.¹
